

The Institute of Employment Rights
& The Connolly Association

Invite you to hear:

Lynn Collins, Regional Secretary, North West TUC

In Conversation with

Tony Donaghey, General Secretary, The Connolly Association

The Dublin Lockout: learning the lessons in the centenary year

Chair: John Hendy QC

Wednesday 30th October, 6.30pm to 8.30pm

At Hearnshaw Lecture Theatre, Eleanor Rathbone Building, University of Liverpool, Bedford Street South, Liverpool L69 7ZA (entrance on Myrtle Street)

www.ier.org.uk

The Dublin Lockout: learning the lessons in the centenary year

In the early 1900s many of Dublin's residents lived in appalling slums. The Irish TGWU struggled for better conditions which, in 1913, resulted in 300,000 workers and 27 unions being locked out of their workplaces. Liverpool workers came out in support of the actions of their Irish comrades and refused to handle traffic from Dublin.

Irish workers suffered a huge injustice at this time, but what lessons can we learn from this dispute and how does it inform our response to social injustice in today's society.

In this centenary year of the Dublin Lockout, Tony Donaghey, General Secretary of the Connolly Association and Lynn Collins, Regional Secretary of the North West TUC will consider the lessons we can learn from this historic event.

FREE

£10 fee to delegates claiming CPD hours.

To book email office@ier.org.uk

